Market Commentary

The third quarter was good for risk assets, with Asian, Emerging Market and US equities all returning high single digit returns. They were helped by a weakness in sterling as Brexit joined centre stage alongside the pandemic. UK equities struggled, returning -3%, although mid & small caps helped limit the losses. Bond returns were mixed with UK Corporates producing positive returns whilst Gilts suffered from the risk on trade, falling just over 1.2%.

The global economy continued to recover from a relaxation of the lockdown measures as governments applied a more targeted approach. Eastern Asia continued to perform better than the rest of the world in containing the virus with subway travel in China only slightly below 2019 levels and above pre-Covid levels. By comparison London remains at only 40% of last year's average. The US approach to the virus has arguably been split along party lines, with Republicans adopting a much more liberal approach to face masks and social distancing. The summer saw a sharp rise in US cases and as autumn drew closer, deaths exceeded 200,000. Europe saw a second wave lead by Spain and France with the UK following suit albeit a step behind. Central banks signalled a lower for longer environment.
