Income Portfolio

The portfolio's objective is to provide outperformance of the Wealth Management Association (WMA) Income Index over the medium term. Returns will be generated through both capital growth and income, with a bias towards developed and liquid capital markets. The risk will be diversified by holding collective investments. The management of the portfolio aims to meet the objective conservatively by taking managed risk through fund selection and asset allocation.

Recent Activity

March was a difficult month for investors as the turbulence that began in February continued. Economic growth remains robust justifying an overweight to equities but with policy becoming less accommodating volatility is likely to remain elevated. This has heightened the market's reaction to an erratic US president and stock specific concerns over some of the most successful technology companies.

The weakness in tech stocks was the biggest detractor from performance but these stocks remain healthy contributors over the first quarter. Outside the US, the only other negative selection was from property with all other regions and assets positive. Europe and Asia were both very strong. In terms of asset allocation being underweight bonds was the biggest detractor but the bias towards sovereign bonds more than offset that. Fund selection in alternatives was positive and while being overweight equities was a negative it remains appropriate for our current point in the cycle.
